

WMGA Foundation

Tiny Tales from the Tee

I was a reluctant golfer. I knew how to hit a long ball from my childhood days joining my father on the driving range but I had no short game and had never played competitively. I hesitantly started playing with a few women who were veterans of the game. By the time the club championship rolled around that summer, they persuaded me to sign up for the class B flight. The day before the first match, one of the women, Karen Fox, took me out on the golf course and spent 2 hours explaining when to give a putt, when to concede a hole and how to handle the pressure of spectators. “Don’t look at them” was her advice.

I’ll never forget her kindness.

Author: Pam Charles, Fresh Meadows - LI

If you enjoy reading Tiny Tales from the Tee, please let us know by donating to the WMGA Foundation by clicking on the link on this page. Your donation can make a big difference in a young woman’s life.

www.wmga.com/wmga-foundation/