

WMGA Foundation

Tiny Tales from the Tee

I was a young lawyer at a prestigious NYC firm. An important corporate client invited members of my firm to their golf outing. The partner I worked for explained that golf outings were a great opportunity to connect with clients.

I started off shaky, and on the second hole sliced my drive onto the adjacent fairway, narrowly missing the CEO of our client. Mortified, I ran over and offered my apology, which he graciously accepted.

When prizes were announced back at the clubhouse, I was called to the podium for having won closest to the pin on the 11th hole. As I went to collect my prize, the CEO yelled “she also won closest to the CEO!” Everyone laughed and I turned bright red. When I returned to my table, the partner from my firm smiled and said “that was not the kind of “connection” I had in mind.”

Author: Anonymous (the names have been redacted to protect the innocent)

If you enjoy reading Tiny Tales from the Tee, please let us know by donating to the WMGA Foundation by clicking on the link on this page. Your donation can make a big difference in a young woman’s life.

www.wmga.com/wmga-foundation/