

WOMEN'S METROPOLITAN GOLF ASSOCIATION FOUNDATION INC. TINY TALES FROM THE TEE

February 2021

Here we are in 2021, the Foundation's 20th year. The vaccine has arrived and hopefully COVID-19 is on its way out. As soon as the weather warms up, we can get back to the game we love and focus on our mission of promoting the game of golf to all women and junior girls and providing scholarships to deserving young women.

In the meantime, let's share golf anecdotes from our own lives — but let's keep it really, really short - no more than 135 words. It can be happy, sad, inspiring, funny or poignant, capturing a moment while you were on or around the golf course. We'd prefer if the tale was about a human connection rather than the rules of golf. We will publish all appropriate entries we receive. Let's call them "Tiny Tales from the Tee." You must include your name when submitting your entry but we will publish your anecdote anonymously, if you prefer. If you'd like to submit a picture along with your short story, we will publish that as well.

We are hoping that these stories incentivize young women to play golf, dispel any notion that golf is dull, and inspire our members to donate to the Foundation so that we can keep promoting the game of golf and help deserving young women with limited resources attain their higher education goals.

Here is our first entry:

As new members of the WMGA, Barbara Briamonte (our current membership chair) and I invited our mothers to play in the WMGA Mother/Daughter tournament. Barbara's mother, Ros Wolk, was in her 80s and the oldest player on the course that day. The format was a Pinehurst. Barbara put her tee shot into the pond of a par three and told her mother how the penalty would be played. As we approached the pond, Ros quickly removed her shoes and socks, grabbed a wedge, entered the edge of the pond and hit the ball onto the fairway. Barbara and I stood there with our mouths wide open. Ros turned to us with a twinkle in her eye and a giggle in her voice and said, "I always wanted to do this!"

We didn't win, but we had the best time.
